“The upholstered Peacock” pp 521
Hans J. Wegner 1954.

As the name implies, pp 521 is an upholstered interpretation of the Peacock Chair, pp 550 from 1947, one of Wegner's favourite designs and best known chairs.

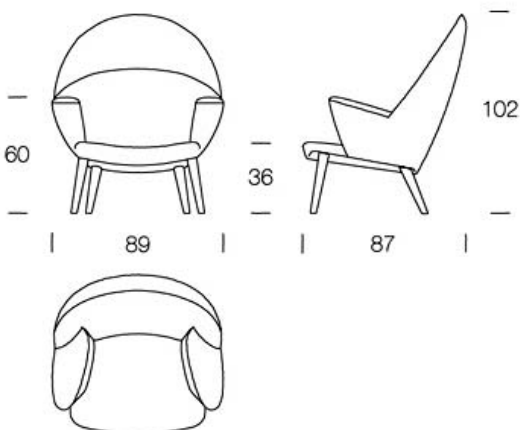

In the Upholstered Peacock Wegner repeated the arch from the original version and covering the construction with fabric and leather making a softer chair.

The elegantly resolved use of leather and fabric in combination is unique and the way these two contradicting materials are so well balanced is a strong example of Wegner's extraordinary sense for the material.

The neck and the armrests allow the sitter to experience the touch of leather, right where it matters the most.

“Things take years. Nothing is made in one go, even if it looks that way”

Hans J. Wegner.
